YOU HAVE A LEGAL PROBLEM WHERE?

Selecting and Managing International Counsel

When your client has dealings in a foreign country, you need to know how to help. This is your opportunity to learn about how different foreign jurisdictions vary from the U.S. and each other, how to identify the key issues your client will face, how lawyers in different regions operate, and how to select counsel with the knowledge and experience to help you. The program will address differences in law practice, basic jurisdictional differences, and considerations in selecting and working with international counsel.

Your client may want to establish operations overseas. It may want to enter into a cross-border sales, supply or investment relationship. It may have been sued by a foreign plaintiff in a foreign jurisdiction. Your client may want to move abroad or may have a question regarding international taxation. In each of these situations, you will need to obtain relevant information and will want to hire and manage international counsel.

This program will assist you in these tasks through three panels, each of which will address a different geographic region: (1) the Americas, (2) Europe and (3) Asia, Oceania and Middle East.

8:45 - 10:00 a.m. Americas Panel

This program will address the Americas region. Experienced international counsel will address the issues that arise when a client faces legal issues in their regions.
